

Christin Deacon is an Assistant Director for the State of New Jersey, Department of Treasury, where she focuses on health benefits for the public sector workforce in New Jersey. She is making waves in the public sector by spearheading unique and innovative approaches to provide high quality affordable care to the public workforce and their dependents. Prior to joining Treasury, Christin served as Assistant Counsel to Governor Chris Christie and as a Deputy Attorney General for the State of New Jersey. Before dedicating her career to public service, Christin practiced corporate restructuring in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, where she holds her law licenses.

As a working mother of three young children (8, 3 and 1), she understands the importance of prioritizing health and well being. To that end, Christin remains active in the community and very involved in her son's travel soccer team. A former soccer player herself, Christin understands the positive impact the sport can have on a community and the children it serves. Christin and her husband Steve are founding season ticket members, and look forward to sharing this tradition with their family and friends for years to come.
